NOSE

Red fruit, with a hint of red flowers.

PALATE

Good weight, smooth texture and marked acidity. Fresh finish.

ABOUT THE WINE

Lágrima means tear, and refers to the free run: only the juice that leaves the grapes under their own weight, without pressing. The result is a pale, smooth rosé with more body than its colour suggests, and an acidity that keeps it fresh to the last sip.

THE CRAFT

How it is made

The road from grape to bottle, step by step, as the winery itself describes it.

- | | | | |
|----------|---|----------|--|
| 1 | HARVEST
Listán Negro is picked by hand and reaches the cellar quickly. | 4 | FERMENTATION
The juice is separated from the skins and fermented under temperature control in stainless steel, one to two weeks. |
| 2 | RUN-OFF
The grapes are not pressed. The first juice is allowed to run off under its own weight — lágrima , the tear. It drains over a matter of hours. | 5 | MATURING
A short spell in steel to stabilise. No oak and no long ageing — the fresh red fruit is meant to stand. |
| 3 | SKIN CONTACT
Very brief. That is why the wine has little tannin and only a pale salmon colour. | 6 | TIME
An estimated four to six months from harvest to market. |

WHAT SETS IT APART

No pressing — only the first juice, running off under its own weight. That accounts for both the pale colour and the delicate structure.

THE WINERY BEHIND THE WINE

The oldest winery in the Canary Islands and one of the ten oldest in Spain, run by the same family across generations. They have made wine without a break since 1775 and turned 250 in 2025 — and have still kept a curiosity that lets them make everything from a bone-dry Brut Nature with years on the lees to a pale rosé from free-run juice.
